State Comptroller Franchot Updates Council on Economy

by Matthew Arbach

On September 30, a special council meeting was convened with Comptroller of Maryland Peter Franchot, Deputy Comptroller Sharone Bonardi and Acting Director of the Bureau of Revenue Estimates (BRE) David Farkas to discuss the findings of a September 29 revenue projection for Fiscal Years 2021 and 2022 and what Greenbelters, the state and nation as a whole should realistically expect in the general economy as the COVID-19 pandemic persists.

The report, made by the BRE, reveals a $1.4 billion increase in projected revenues for FY 2021 from the previous forecast made in May. While this number is encouraging, Franchot and his associates were firm in saying that this is not a turning of the corner, and that the economic situation, contingent on several unknown variables, could very well worsen in the near future. Said Franchot, the "numbers were not as bad as

by GHI Communications Committee

The COVID-19 financial crisis has greatly affected some Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) members. To address the challenge, GHI has allowed members to defer up to four months of cooperative fees under a special COVID-19 emergency fee deferral policy. As of the end of August 2020, the deferred fees totaled $16,440. GHI members Cynthia Newcomer See GHI, page 8 and Jason Luly have offered to help shoulder this financial burden for the affected members and believe other GHI members would like to do the same. Newcomer and Luly have been working with the GHI Board of Directors over several months to create a crowd-sourced fund to which

by Kathleen Gallagher

The agenda for a Special Meeting scheduled on September 21 with the purpose of picking up the pace for discussing matters related to the proposed superconducting magnetic levitation railway system (SCMaglev) was itself delayed and came to an ending of sorts at the regular meeting of October 5.

The original September 21 meeting had been requested by Mayor Colin Byrd and Councilmember Rodney Roberts for the purpose of accelerating the city's planning and response to a sudden resurgence of activity and change of schedule for releasing the Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) for the maglev project.

The resolution for establishing a city task force to work with others to oppose building maglev and a discussion about identifying an environmental engineer or consultant to advise the city on the findings of the DEIS were to be on the agenda for the next regular meeting on September 28, but that meeting was unexpectedly postponed to October 5.

Roberts was particularly eager to get the anti-maglev show on the road. He said both the resolution for the task force and the discussion about the

The department has also seen a higher proportion of autopart theft this year relative to the theft of property from inside vehicles. Bike theft rates have remained almost steady, with 19 thefts citywide since the beginning of the year.

> Bowers noted that the perpetrators of the auto parts theft are likely to be professionals who are able to quickly resell parts with Toyotas and Hondas as the apparent most frequent targets.

> To reduce the risk of auto theft, George Mathews, public information liaison for the police department, said that Greenbelt residents should take items of value out of their cars or hide them. They should also alert police officers when they recognize suspicious behavior so officers can check out the area.

Officer Timothy White, who oversees the patrol division, noted ave remained close to numbers city as a whole since the year sponse to a suspected crime or person based on the description Greenbelt citizens call in to the station. If a description is vague, he said, officers cannot do much more than survey the area.

To combat bike theft, the Greenbelt Police Department offers bike registrations, which can be a deterrent to criminals, and can also help the department track down stolen bikes. A onetime registration is good forever, but residents are encouraged to reach out to the police department once a year to update any information that has changed.

Mathews also proposed the idea of a Neighborhood Watch, something that Greenbelt has had in the past. However, he noted by email, "the impetus has to come from residents, with the department doing what it can to facilitate."

Letters to the Editor

Thanks, Susan Taylor

Thank you for featuring the article by Susan Taylor, Of Greenbelt and Whiteness: The Context of Racism, in last week's edition. Taylor keenly lays out the situation of White people and offers both analysis and suggestions to use in changing our ways. We love Greenbelt and living in GHI; our five years here have been marked by much joy, a sense of community and well-being. Yet over time, we have come to realize that what we experience in Old Greenbelt is often not what residents in other parts of our city, particularly BIPOC people, experience. Taylor reminds us that race is not a biological category, but a social one that creates dominance and inequality. Segregation is not limited to the "old days" in the South. Lack of public investment in and concern for some parts of our city leads to unequal educational and recreation opportunities, inadequate housing and uneven public safety. This is not unique to Greenbelt, of course, but we believe we can do better. The contemporary reality reminds us of the earlier one, to which Taylor alluded: our founding as a legally segregated community. Indeed, according to information we have read, the 14 Black families who lived and farmed on part of what is now Greenbelt received little compensation for their land and were not allowed to live in the community built on that land. Black people worked on crews, building the new town, but left after their work. We who are identified as White have much work to do, here and in our state, nation and world. First, as Taylor suggests, we must face reality, look ourselves in the mirror, resolve to change and help others to do so, as well.

Rev. Dr. Robin Hawley Gorsline Dr. Jonathan Lebolt

A Better Name

Every time I see the initials BLM I feel slighted! I know black people have felt the pain of racism and the death of innocent young black people for too long a time in our history. We must stick together on this and BLM seems to bring us apart. Those initials are put on shirts, pro basketball courts and the main street in the capital of our country. I think our Latino friends and all white and black people as well as all races matter. I would like as examples E.R.N. (END RAC-ISM NOW) or R.H.A. (RACISM HURTS AMERICA), so we are all in this fight together!

Oh, Great Pumpkin

Should I buy Halloween candy to give out this year? Should I expect to hear a knock on my door, followed by the sounds of children saying "Trick-Or-Treat"? Last year, 50 kids knocked on my door asking for, and receiving, treats. Will that be the case this year? Oh, Great Pumpkin, will you ask the parents of the kids if they will be allowing their kids out for treats this year? And ask the City Council what their thoughts are and what advice they have for us candy buyers.

Did you just get a new dog, during the pandemic? Do you know how it would respond to distractions when walking in the community or what training might be needed to take a dog out and keep it safe? There is an easy way to find out – AKA has created tests to rate the skills of humans and their dog to safely navigate public spaces at aka.org.

Allie W. Lee, owner of Greenbelt Dog Training and an AKA certified CGC evaluator, will conduct the testing. For additional information call 301-345-6999, email info@greenbeltdogtraining.com or visit greenbeltdogtraining.com.

Candlelight Vigil

The weekly candlelight vigil formerly held at the corner of Hanover Parkway and Ora Glen Drive has been relocated. It is now held on the second and fourth Saturday of every month from 7 to 8 p.m. at the intersection of Breezewood Drive and Cherrywood Lane, near the Shell station. The purpose of these vigils is to provide community members an opportunity to gather with candles and signs and to engage in dialogue to better understand one another and to understand issues of policing as well as sources of racism. All are welcome to join and it is not necessary for participants to bring a candle.

Haunt the Highway

During these recurring Haunt the Highway events, the names of over 80 Black victims of police brutality will be recited. The final march will be held November 1, which is All Saints Day, a Christian holiday honoring all saints, known and unknown. The inspiration for these events comes from Maryland State Delegate Julian Ivey of District 47A (Prince George's County) who has been posting names to Twitter daily in an attempt to urge other state delegates to open a special session of the Maryland General Assembly and pass Anton's Law. No advance registration is required for those wishing to participate in any of the marches.

GCAN Meets

Greenbelt Climate Action Network (GCAN) will hold its next monthly meeting, via Zoom, on Wednesday, October 14, 7 to 9 p.m.

The first half of the meeting will focus on the THRIVE (Transform, Heal, and Renew by Investing in a Vibrant Economy) Agenda Resolution, which was recently introduced into Congress (see sierraclub.org/THRIVE). The discussion will explore the eight "pillars" of the agenda and compare them to the Six Principles for a Just Recovery discussed last month. It is not necessary to have attended last month for this discussion, as the Six Principles will be briefly reviewed.

The remainder of the time will be used to begin to narrow down GCAN's campaign goals for the fall. This month, there will be brief updates about seven of the 17 options: Campaign for Environmental Human Rights; Beyond Coal; Maryland Legislative Coalition; Climate Justice goals; Composting for Large Institutions; Transportation & Climate Initiative; Prince George's County School Board; Climate Action Plan; Clean Air Prince George's; Brandywine Power Plants. Participants will be invited to join a "straw poll" to help rank order the interest in the various options.

Obituaries

Nathan Hughes, III

Nathan "Skip" Hughes

The thing is, while this year was busy irritating just about everyone on the planet, it saved some extra nonsense for Nathan "Skip" Beers Hughes, III, who died on September 28, 2020. Surprisingly, his death was not due to the spiders living in the shed with the radioactive rocks nor was it due to the gout his mother swore he had. He was thwarted by the tiny buttons on his cell phone and struggled to type anything with his ogre paws. He quite possibly decided to take his leave to avoid upgrading his flip phone.

Skip grew up in, lived in, and loved Old Greenbelt. His youth was spent with many fellow young Greenbelters and filled with shenanigans, not all of which he was willing to admit to later on. He loved the Ravens, drinking beer, creeping out kids at Halloween, hunting, fishing, camping, fossil and rock collecting. (Who knew you could fit that many tons of rocks in an Old Greenbelt townhouse?)

Skip worked for District Photo for over 42 years, something he wasn't sure whether it was an accomplishment or proof of his insanity. He also worked for Behnke's Nursery for many years during the holidays and always came home smelling like Christ-

Skip leaves behind his two daughters, Heather Hughes and Corrine Hughes, who will grow up to avenge his death. He was a loving and caring father and his daughters meant the world to him. Skip is also survived by his mother, Elizabeth Buckner, who we all believe is stubborn enough to outlive all her children. Skip's older brother, Dale Hughes (mom's favorite), no longer has his little brother to blame things on, pick on or roll down the stairs. Skip was a dedicated uncle to Kimberly Hughes Barr and Jesse Hughes, teaching them useful life skills they could have used to escape and live in the wild. He was also a great-uncle to Kevin Whitaker, Jonah Hughes and Avery Hughes. Skip was preceded in death by his father, Nathan "Nat" Beers Hughes, Jr., and his sister, Cynthia Diane Hughes. The family feels that his untimely death was a bit of an excessive way to avoid the holidays with them this year.

The Celebration of Life for Nathan "Skip" Beers Hughes, III, will be on Saturday, October 10 at 2 p.m. at Buddy Attick Park. Bring a chair - masks and social distancing required - and bring memories to share.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made in his name to the Greenbelt Animal Shelter, the Wildlife Conservation Society or the National Rifle Association.

Directions from the parking lot: Follow the main path toward the lake. Turn left on the path that goes around the lake. The Celebration of Life will be on the right side along the lake.

Our Neighbors

Our condolences to the family and friends of Skip Hughes, who died last month. They will gather Saturday, October 10 at the Lake to celebrate his exuberant life and share memories.

A hearty Greenbelt welcome to the Reverend Curtiss DeMars-Johnson, the Greenbelt Community Church, United Church of Christ's new interim minister.

Congratulations to Daniel Dancis, who grew up in old Greenbelt and graduated from Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Proud dad, Greenbelter Jerome Dancis, tells us that as part of Daniel's work at the National Archives and Records Administration, he presented a talk, Researching World War II Spanish Posters at the National Archives, about posters by Mexican artists that were commissioned by the U.S. Government. This was part of an effort to minimize racial tensions in Los Angeles during WWII and to appeal to the people of Latin America in order to contain Nazi activities in Latin America. Daniel's presentation is available at hispanicheritagemonth.gov as part of the federal government's tribute to National Hispanic American Heritage Month.

The Greenbelt Community Church, United Church of Christ welcomes the Reverend Curtiss DeMars-Johnson as the interim minister during a time of reflection and revitalization for the church. "In following the guidelines of the United Church of Christ, Greenbelt Community Church will work alongside the interim minister as we prepare to search for a called or settled pastor in the next year or so," said Karen Yoho, church moderator. "Interim ministers have special training and proficiency in working with churches like ours. We are thrilled to have an experienced and energetic leader join us in this work."

DeMars-Johnson served as an interim and settled pastor in the Midwest and Western U.S., including Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Colorado. "Humanity's collective life suffers when any one group thinks of its own well-being in isolation from that of its neighbours or pursues economic gain without regard for how the natural environment, which provides sustenance for all, is affected. A stubborn obstruction, then, stands in the way of meaningful social progress... There is no justification for continuing to perpetuate structures, rules, and systems that manifestly fail to serve the interests of all peoples."

TRICK-OR TREAT

Governor Hogan has renewed his declaration of the COVID-19 state of emergency and catastrophic health emergency. Additionally, the CDC had declared Trick-or-Treating as a risky activity and recommends other ways to celebrate. If you decide that you will be Trick-or-Treating, please observe these suggestions.

- · Participating in one-way trickor-treating where individually wrapped goodie bags are lined up for families to grab and go while continuing to social distance (such as at the end of a driveway or at the edge of a yard)
- If you are preparing goodie bags, wash your hands with soap and water for at least 20 second before and after preparing the bags.
- A costume mask (such as for Halloween) is not a substitute for a cloth mask. A costume mask should not be used unless it is made of two or more layers of breathable fabric that covers the mouth and nose and doesn't leave gaps around the face.
- Do not wear a costume mask over a protective cloth mask because it can be dangerous if the costume mask makes it hard to breathe. Instead, consider using a Halloween-themed cloth mask.

Greenbelt Alliance Celebrates Cooperatives in October

by Leta Mach

This is the first of two articles on celebrating cooperatives in October is Co-op Month, a time to recognize and celebrate cooperatives. This year's Co-op Month theme is Cooperatives -Commit to Diversity, Equity and Inclusion, which celebrates how co-ops comprise people working together to make their communities and the world a better place for everyone. This year, due to the pandemic, most of the co-op celebrations and recognition have been virtual or by promotional articles and information.

Cooperatives have been working on behalf of their members and communities since 1844 when the Rochdale Equitable Pioneers Society opened a consumer co-op store in England. The success of the pioneers came from the practices and procedures under which they operated. These practices have been updated through the years by the International Cooperative Alliance (ICA) and they form the basis for today's cooperative principles. Greenbelt's many cooperatives are part of this strong tradition. Cooperation

By working together in the Greenbelt Cooperative Alliance (GCA), Greenbelt cooperatives carry out one of the most important principles, cooperation among cooperatives. Each year, alliance members organize activities for October Co-op Month. Co-op Month in Greenbelt will begin on Monday, October 12 with a proclamation from council and the celebration will continue throughout October.

Membership

Voluntary and Open Membership is the first principle listed by ICA. In many respects this is because cooperatives are membership organizations and without member support they will fail. Co-ops are open to all people able to use their services and willing to accept the responsibilities of membership. When a family enrolls in Greenbelt Nursery School, they become members of that co-op. Their responsibilities include participating in every aspect of the school's operation from governance to fundraising to maintenance.

After finding a Greenbelt Homes Inc. (GHI) home, potential members apply for membership and their responsibilities include paying their monthly coop fee. Greenbelt News Review volunteers who work regularly become members of the newspaper's worker cooperative.

With as little as $10, people become members of the Coop Supermarket and Pharmacy. When their capital account is $100 or higher, they become voting members. A critical member responsibility is to shop at the store. Members of the Greenbelt Federal Credit Union also have a responsibility to use the credit union's services and maintain a minimum balance in their share savings account, which makes them members of the financial co-op. When MakerSpace converted to a community co-op, founding members became coowners for a membership fee of $20 per year.

Participation

It is crucial to the success of a cooperative that members use the services of the cooperative. Using the local cooperative is also good for the local economy. For every $100 spent locally, roughly $68 to $73 dollars is returned to local activity because locally owned businesses often purchase from other local businesses, service providers and farms. Purchasing local helps grow other businesses as well as the region's

As a not-for-profit organization, a credit union generally offers better rates than for-profit banks. Members of GHI pool resources to make housing more affordable. When times are good, Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy members receive an annual patronage dividend based on the financial performance of the store. Likewise, members of the Greenbelt News Review may receive a dividend that depends upon the financial resources of the paper. The volunteer work of Greenbelt Nursery School members helps the school provide high-quality early childhood education at a moderate cost. Greenbelt Maker-Space Cooperative members save money by learning how to repair equipment.

Candidates Sought For Co-op Board

Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative (GCC) is seeking candidates willing to run for election to its board of directors. The Co-op will conduct its election at its virtual annual meeting on Saturday, November 7 at 10 a.m. Two board members will be elected to serve three-year terms. Incumbents Linda Ivy and Barbara Ford are running for re-election. Members interested in serving as directors can pick up nomination forms at the Co-op's customer service office. To be considered, a member must: (1) have a minimum of $100 in their member capital account and (2) submit both a brief biography and the completed nomination form by Monday, October 19. GCC does not accept nominations at the annual meeting.

Utopia Film Festival To Be Online This Fall

The Utopia Film Festival, in its 16th consecutive year, had to cancel the live festival this year.

The pandemic forced the venues closed, yet the festival's agreement with the source of most of its films, Film Freeway, required live festivals.

As did almost all other film festivals, Utopia had to postpone or cancel.

However, many worthwhile films were submitted before the announcement was made. So that some of these films may be made available, the festival will be hosting, via interactive internet screenings, some of these important and worthwhile movies later in October and early November.

Here are descriptions of three of them. Illegal tells the plight of many refugees and immigrants at the U.S. southern border. The Definition of Insanity tells of the progressive judicial, social services and police enforcement work in Broward County, Florida. Suppressed: The Fight to Vote documents the recent gubernatorial election in Georgia.

Schedules, previews and announcements will be forthcoming.

Community Conversations: Connecting Across Greenbelt

by Tom Adams and Lois Rosado

Breaking down barriers between East, West and Historic Greenbelt is the goal of Connecting Across Greenbelt by fostering Community Conversations. No matter how long a person has lived in Greenbelt, if one knows much about the rest of the city, they are among the few. There are so many man-made barriers - Greenbelt Road, the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, Kenilworth Avenue. Without a destination, one stays close to home.

This physical isolation reinforces the challenge of understanding and meeting the needs of all our neighborhoods in an equitable way. Without action, the pandemic makes these divides

Residents from all parts of Greenbelt have come together for Community Conversations. There have been three conversations so far and the next one is scheduled for Thursday, October 15 at 7 p.m. via Zoom. On the agenda are plans for GOSH (Greenbelt's Own Scavenger Hunt), in collaboration with RUAK, the weekend of October 24 and 25 and a Community Forum on Mental Health in November.

From the conversations so far, the following purpose and goals for Community Conversations have been developed:

Purpose: To enhance the quality of life for all residents of Greenbelt, by convening a series of grassroots cross-community, cross-neighborhood and crosscultural conversations.

Goals: To increase understanding and appreciation of all residents, neighbors and neighborhoods, while building communication and improving interpersonal relationships across our city; to identify community assets and determine how they are used to address challenges facing each of Greenbelt's neighborhoods participating in the conversations; and to determine actions needed to ensure that resources and services are equitably distributed through the City of Greenbelt.

All Greenbelt residents are invited to participate in these conversations. Email communityconnectionsgb@gmail. com to get the Zoom link for the October 15, 7 p.m. meeting or to

Reel and Meal Kicks Off 14th Year of Relevant Films

by Cam MacQueen, Vijay Parameshwaran and Susan Barnett

On September 21, Reel and Meal at the New Deal Café, the monthly film and vegan dinner series, celebrated the kickoff of its 14th year with a viewing of The Condor and The Eagle.

The documentary centered on the issues of climate change, Indigenous rights and environmental justice across both North and South America. The film screening was facilitated by Vijay Parameshwaran and was shown in partnership with the Paint Branch Unitarian Universalist Church Social Action Committee and the Unitarian Universalist Ministry for Earth. The post-screening discussion featured Aly Tharp with the Ministry for Earth and Professor Nicole Fabricant with Towson University and the South Baltimore Community Land Trust.

Discussion topics were varied and involved much passionate conversation. The Baltimore-Washington Maglev project was discussed as an environmental justice issue. The politics of South American countries such as Ecuador, Bolivia and Brazil were discussed in the context of Indigenous rights and environmental issues. Attendees brought up collective efforts supporting Indigenous peoples as well as ideas for rethinking how to divest from fossil fuels and reinvest in renewable energy. An overarching theme was how to transform from an extractive economy based on fossil fuels to a regenerative economy based on environmentalism and renewable energy.

Although the situation is currently bleak throughout much of the Americas, attendees expressed hope for the planet and its inhabitants and inspiration from those continuing to fight for environmental rights, as well as the social justice movements of 2020 that environmental groups are now actively supporting. As is typical of Reel and Meal events, many follow-up actions were shared in which individuals could engage.

A Brief History

Reel and Meal started 14 years ago with a group of Greenbelt activists concerned over the fate of the New Deal Café. In those days, the Café was new to Roosevelt Center, having started in the Community Center as a weekend gathering place to hear live music and enjoy vegetarian and vegan bites. As with most startups, it was unclear if the Café could make it in its new location with greatly expanded hours, so the group decided to try to find a way to support this important community resource.

Today, the program is still intimately tied to the Café, now a local institution – the community living room – and the place to go to hear live music and enjoy delicious, earth-and-animal-friendly food, thanks to the talents of DC Vegan. Reel and Meal is made up of Beaverdam Creek Watershed Watch Group, Green Vegan Networking, Prince George's County Peace and Justice Coalition and Utopia Film Festival with graphic design support since nearly the beginning from Jean Newcomb. From the start the series has focused on bringing the local community together to see relevant documentaries and discuss timely social justice, environmental and animal rights issues.

Going Virtual

Reel and Meal had to pivot to transition to this new pandemic reality. The silver lining is that the programming is now reaching a much wider, more diverse audience and has expanded beyond the bounds of Greenbelt. The September event drew participants from Ecuador, Colorado and Canada. This expansion is an exciting development encouraging for both Reel and Meal and the New Deal Café.

Moving into its 14th year, Reel and Meal will explore ways to continue growing. Hopefully, at some point in the near future, it will morph back into an in-person event where food is shared, conversation and networking flow, and the new Zoom family can help co-create in the original brick and mortar Café Reel and Meal experience.

Reel and Meal has always been grateful for the symbiotic partnership with the New Deal Café – each supporting the other. It could not have made it this far without the ongoing loyalty of its friends in Greenbelt. Reel and Meal thanks those who have supported it as it reaches this phenomenal 14-year milestone.

To be added to the Zoom list, contact reelandmeal@newdealcafe.com and follow on Facebook and the Café website. Reserve Monday, October 19 for the Utopia Film Festival screening of The Definition of Insanity by Gabriel London.

GNR Archive Sparks Memories For Pioneer Barbara McGowan

by Cathie Meetre

The News Review was lucky to receive a call a few weeks ago from Barbara McGowan, who, as Barbara Bradley, moved into Greenbelt in 1937 with one of the pioneer families. She lived for 18 years with her family at 7-E Ridge, just across from the Kellahers who then lived in 8 Court. She called to follow up on our Archive story from the August 27 issue that told of her father, George Bradley, who, after working for the federal government in D.C, in 1945 was manager of the Tobacco Shop, which sold candy and cigarettes. She remembers him walking from their home down to Southway where he caught the bus.

Indeed, we have earlier news of her father in June 25, 1943, when an article states, "Presenting George Bradley, new manager of the Hillside Road food store. One look at the freshly scrubbed floors, well-stocked shelves and neat signs at this establishment will convince you that here is a man who knows his business and enjoys it. Mr. Bradley has many plans in mind for the Hillside store, one of which is to stock it so well with a variety of lines that people in the Northern section will be spared too many wearisome trips to the Center. Many Northenders already appreciate being able to purchase razor blades, tooth powder, shoe polish, and the like here. Mr. Bradley has added fly swatters, scrubbing brushes, and mops to the growing list of extra conveniences. 'I'd like to get more meat up here,' says Bradley. 'And if I can get hold of more refrigeration, I certainly will."

McGowan, it turns out, appears in the Cooperator (the News Review's original name) in her own right. In the issue of September 23, 1948, she joins the choir at St. Hugh's and there she is again listed as a babysitter in the issue of September 1, 1949.

McGowan was the oldest in the family, with three younger brothers – one of whom, Bill Rich, still lives in Greenbelt. It was he who called her up to let her know about the story. She recounted that her cousin Norman McCarthy and his wife Joanne also lived nearby. McCarthy played a variety of leadership roles for the Greenbelt Little League, including Farm Team manager.

On the phone, McGowan recounted a story she remembered about her father. The man who cleaned the offices and the movie theater, and who was well known to everybody, was bitten by a black widow spider. George Bradley rushed him to the small hospital that was then on Gardenway, where they gave him a shot. A search of the archive at greenbeltnewsreview. com quickly finds the story in the issue of January 19, 1945. "Jerry Goodin, G.C.S. (Greenbelt Consumer Services – later the Co-op) Porter, is home in bed after being bitten early Wednesday morning by a Black Widow spider. The spider took up quarters in Mr. Goodin's gloves shortly after he came to work and when he went to put them on again she expressed her indignation at being disturbed. Mr. Goodin did not pay much attention to the bite at the time and it was only when his finger and hand began to swell that he was persuaded to seek medical attention. Mr. George Bradley, manager of the Tobacco Shop where Goodin was at the time, saw to it that he was taken up to the Health Association where he was treated by Dr. Hans Wodak. Mr. Goodin is the only full-time Porter working for G.C.S. at the present time, and has been with the cooperative for about five years."

Forever after that, Goodin always talked about Bradley as "the man who saved my life." McGowan notes that in those days, everything you needed was right there in Greenbelt – including a hospital.

McGowan lived in Greenbelt with her family for 18 years and, when she got married, first lived in the apartments by the Roosevelt Center and then moved to 44-J Ridge Road around 1955. McGowan said it was wonderful to live there – she would put the kids in the carriage and walk to the lake. She said that she walked everywhere.

McGowan (301-801-8259) would be delighted to hear from any of her old friends still living in the area

they could have possibly been," yet these continue to be "tough and serious times," in the face of unusual and challenging circumstances

Franchot said that the present situation defies classical economic analysis, in that such a drop in revenue would typically be expected to bring a major downturn in the economy, but that "it didn't happen this time." He said that tax revenues from the newly unemployed stayed more or less the same and that business tax withholding from employees has been a significant source of revenues.

He credited the $2.2 trillion federal stimulus as the chief reason, which he described as unbelievably expensive, but also effective and a godsend. Specifically, he cited the CARES Act, the Paycheck Protection Program and the $600 federal weekly unemployment subsidy (now ended).

He stressed though, that another federal stimulus is desperately needed and almost mandatory for the economy to retain this level of stability. Such future stimulus remains uncertain.

The September 29 report is only a temporary assessment, awaiting a more comprehensive and expansive report in December, which will be used by the state legislature in its budget deliberations.

The uncertainty is based on two major factors: the yet-to-beapproved second federal stimulus and the unpredictability of the virus itself. Franchot characterized the virus as a game changer for all predictions.

Franchot revealed that on June 30, the end of FY 2020, the State of Maryland reported a positive fund balance of $585.8 million. He was keen on making that fund available immediately for the state's small businesses, which are suffering severe challenges to stay open. He said that "small businesses have done so much for the state."

Said Franchot, Governor Larry Hogan has indicated that he would like to keep that money for public budgets. Franchot countered Hogan, saying that there already exists a $1.2 billion Rainy Day Fund that could be allocated for this. Franchot said that possibly $100 million from that fund could be set aside for businesses as an alternative. Franchot added that constructive conversations with Hogan are ongoing.

He encouraged council to draft a letter to the governor expressing their desire to see the $585.8 million made available for small businesses. Council agreed to discuss the matter at an upcoming meeting.

Bonardi, whom Franchot extolled for her indispensable administrative efforts, said that the agency has "performed well under unfortunate circumstances," processing more tax returns than in previous years. Effective customer service is a priority. The Greenbelt office is now open by appointment only.

Farkas echoed Franchot's update and recommendations, predicting a slowing of wage growth as the year proceeds, while also saying that he didn't "forecast an outright decline." He said that while the labor market has done poorly, individual income has sustained, mostly due to federal funds, and that sales did not decrease as badly as forecast in May. He said that the lack of a second stimulus would create a worse situation.

In reply to a question from Councilmember Judith Davis, Franchot said that the jury is still out on some of the state grants that the city relies on, like the Highway User revenues. This grant is essential to Greenbelt and "needed to be funded," said Franchot, with "money needing to be found somewhere." Yet, he added, with less traffic due to the pandemic, the revenues should be expected to go down.

Councilmember Emmett Jordan asked about adding nonprofit organizations to future stimulus packages, as they are exempt currently. He cited the nonprofit Old Greenbelt Theatre which would benefit greatly. Franchot concurred and supported the idea, citing the AFI Theatre in Silver Spring.

Franchot gave an update on the unfinished Purple Line. The previous lead contractor is under investigation by both the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Department of Justice for illegal business practices, with jail likely for its leadership. He said that the state has now taken charge and is committed to completing the job, even if it means another year of work and a higher cost.

Council reminded Franchot that they support the no-build option on the maglev proposal and are opposed to the widening of the Beltway. Franchot was receptive to their concerns and promised to keep council aware of any updates. Councilmember Rodney Roberts said that the pandemic has made a stark case for the abandonment of the Beltway widening, in light of the reduced traffic and more virtual work.

Franchot said that residents should expect a two- to four-year economic recovery period for a return to pre-pandemic norms. The state will need to be cautious about new spending, taxes and fees. He said that the goal is to put cash back into people's pockets and into businesses, to rebuild the small-business economy.

and ecological issues for decades. He shares his views on justice, "We all are created by God to have lives of dignity, purpose and potential. Justice occurs when people are allowed and encouraged to find self-expression that is honored respectfully in a society with many diverse viewpoints. Diversity is a blessing from God to us."

DeMars-Johnson also taught elementary and middle school students. "It's a spectacular experience to work alongside young learners and do what it takes to get kids, who were failing in the system, to engage in learning." In 2002, he wrote a textbook – Igniting Your Genius: The Startling Fusion of Creativity, Curiosity, Intellect, Passion, and Awe – about the blessings of engaging people and experiences with students.

DeMars-Johnson believes "life is more enjoyable when we remain curious and engage with others. We can do this by asking unasked questions and practice listening deep for their responses and questions. Learning the art of seeing what people are saying and not saying communicates clues." He used this technique with students and found the most common response from students was, "I don't know because nobody ever asked me about that before." What happened next was real engagement with students.

In this time of COVID-19, Sunday worship services at Greenbelt Community Church are continuing to be virtual only, broadcast via Zoom and on Facebook Live. DeMars-Johnson is using Zoom to meet church members and members of the community for now. "Curt's warmth and love come through when you see him on Zoom or talk to him on Facetime," said Yoho. "He has inspiring and uplifting messages to share of hope and love."

Brothers Nathaniel and Eli ride bikes on the empty sidewalks of Greenbelt Elementary School. It's nice to see some kids playing at the school even if they can't play with their teachers and friends.

GHI members and others can contribute to offset the fees deferred by those GHI members financially affected by COVID-19. They hope to raise enough money to completely pay off the deferred fees. As Newcomer said, "We're a cooperative. Let's cooperate – because as a cooperative, we are all in this together."

The chosen fundraising platform is at chuffed.org/project/ghi-relief-fund. Newcomer and Luly believe that using chuffed. org will allow a campaign that is transparent, communicative and integrated with other social media. Although using the chuffed platform itself is free, payment processing is not free. Two percent of the donation goes to a payment processor. Donors may add an optional percentage to their donation to defray the payment processing costs.

The funds raised on the chuffed.org site will be directly transferred to GHI to forgive the deferred fees and reduce the amount that the affected members will have to pay back to GHI beginning in January 2021 when the fee deferral period ends. The funds will be distributed equally by GHI to the deferred balances of the participating members until the balances are zero or until all transferred funds have been depleted, whichever occurs first. Any funds raised in excess of the deferred fees will be deposited into the GHI general fund.

GHI has allowed members to defer up to four months of cooperative fees under a special COVID-19 emergency fee deferral policy.

Newcomer and Luly kicked off the fundraising drive on September 23 and hope that GHI members and others join them in donating online and spread the word to friends and neighbors. No donation is too big or too environmental consultant or engineer were on the agenda for the following week, but he requested the Special Meeting to initiate action earlier than that.

Timeline

Councilmember Judith Davis asked Planning Director Terri Hruby to explain the timeline as it now exists for responding to Hruby explained that the DEIS will be released on January 22. Public hearings will be held February 21, and the comment period will be January 22 until March 8. Davis commented that it would then be the late January to early March period that should be the city's target for having its documents and testimony prepared, to which Hruby agreed.

According to Hruby, Greenbelt is a participating agency but not a cooperating agency in the review process. An administrative DEIS is scheduled to be sent to cooperating federal agencies next week, with their review comments due in mid-November. These comments will be used to revise the DEIS before its release to the public in January. Davis asked why Greenbelt could not directly contact the federal agencies that make up the cooperating agencies and ask for copies of their statements. City Solicitor Todd Pounds replied that they could indeed do that. Councilmember Edward Putens said it might be the case that the agencies were not free to provide copies of those opinions, and he also recommended that the requests include materials not only from the main agency but from offices within it. Pounds indicated that if the agencies would not supply the statements, he would file Public Information Act (PIA) requests as needed.

Task Force

The resolution to establish the Greenbelt SCMaglev Opposition Task Force was unanimously adopted, and for several weeks the city ad in this paper has task force and about applying to participate. The task force will include representatives of the city's advisory boards and committees and homeowner associations, and it also seeks residents with experience in the following areas: environmental engineering, major transportation projects, environmental law, social justice and community advocacy. Councilmembers hope to have representation from all parts of

Environmental Engineer

Roberts said that, as with the task force, he wanted to pass an ordinance that night to proceed with the hiring of an environmental consultant or firm. He envisioned authorizing staff to undertake the search and hiring, and he made a motion to that effect. Pounds ran through a list of possibilities he had explored for consultants, but the number of interested companies was not large.

Davis disagreed with Roberts, saying there needed to be more information and that council needs to have a list of viable possibilities. She said they could move on it quickly. Staff featured information about the can investigate, she said, but council needs to make the decision. Councilmember Leta Mach agreed with Davis, as did Councilmember Emmett Jordan, saying more time should be taken.

Davis asked to have the matter continued on the agenda of the September 28 meeting (which eventually became the October 5 meeting). She said council needed information on candidates' qualifications, backgrounds and project experience, as well as

The mayor had seconded Roberts' motion for the purpose of discussion but said he thought Davis' points were well taken and that all that council was really doing tonight was receiving a briefing from the attorney.

Roberts argued that council had previously authorized the prior city manager to hire in the situation, but councilmembers disagreed with him, and he eventually withdrew the motion.

Because of the relatively limited responses to Pounds' queries, councilmembers asked staff to prepare materials to serve as a Request for Proposals (RFP).

The town hall had 22 attendees and was held as a part of ongoing meetings the police department has had with different Greenbelt neighborhoods. Prior to this town hall, the department met with residents from Greenbelt East, Franklin Park and Greenbelt Station.

During the town hall, Bowers indicated a desire to offer minisessions of the Citizen's Police Academy to inform Greenbelt residents on the use of force by police officers. The Citizen's Police Academy is an eight-week program that gives Greenbelt residents an opportunity to experience what it is like to be a police officer. The department has offered three programs over the past few years.

Soccer Teaches Skills Beyond the Field for ERHS Alumna

by Amy Lepore

For many students, high school sports are an opportunity to be active, make friends, and have fun. But for Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) alumna Kate Monroe, soccer was much more.

Monroe was born and raised in Hyattsville. Before graduating in 2014, she participated in a variety of extracurricular activities, though none more influential than soccer. Her four years on the team were "an incomparable constant," allowing her to grow as an individual and a teammate. "Coming in as a freshman, I was in awe of the older girls on the team who were such cool examples of how to be successful on and off the field," Monroe says. From the very first day of school, the ERHS soccer team made her feel welcome. She describes the team as a "committed community of friends" that supply each other with unwavering support and a sense of belonging. By her senior year, Monroe became a mentor for the younger players, just like those she admired as a freshman.

ERHS soccer also gave Monroe valuable skills that she continues to carry through her life.

"Teamwork, positivity and clear communication," she says, are among the attributes she learned as an athlete. She also learned that recognition does not come easily; determination and dedication are rewarded over impatience. Experiencing setbacks and failures is likely, but Monroe learned it's important to stay focused and steadfast.

"Working hard and with purpose despite roadblocks along the way can lead to some of the most meaningful experiences in life," she says.

Her journey to success was not one she traveled alone, though. Like many young athletes, Monroe doubted her abilities before joining the soccer team. "You can never know what something will be like until you try," she says. Ultimately, it was positive feedback, an emphasis on sportsmanship and encouragement from her coaches and teammates that led to her success.

"Real success and a sense of satisfaction are tied deeply to one's attitude, a willingness to remain open to learning and the support of their community," she

Since graduating, Monroe has applied the lessons she attained through soccer to all aspects of her life. In the spring of 2015, she began attending Middlebury College in Vermont where she studied Chinese language and literature. Though she hasn't formally played soccer since high school, she has taken on rugby, joined a dance group and sung as a part of an a capella group. She has also traveled, interned on farms, worked as a food delivery driver, and taught preschool at a bilingual immersion school in

"My roles in all of those things and more were definitely shaped by my previous experiences with team sports and collaboration, like those on Roosevelt's soccer team," Monroe concludes.

Babe Ruth Baseball Returns Now for Reduced Practice

by Ian Gleason

Entering 2020, Greenbelt Babe Ruth Baseball was coming off a successful spring and fall 2019 season. There was additional excitement and hope for even higher player turnout and dedication motivated by the Washington Nationals' World Series victory. Then a week before practice was set to start, everything halted on account of the pandemic.

Fast forward to September, after almost a full year of no baseball activities for Greenbelt Babe Ruth due to the offseason and coronavirus shutdown, baseball has returned to Greenbelt.

Practices have resumed at Braden Field at a reduced capacity. For the time being practices consist of a limited number of players and coaches and have been adapted to address the potential spread of the virus. While a normal fall season - accompanied by another World Series championship – would be ideal, the return to practice is welcome to both players and coaches. Getting back out on the field brings the hope of brighter days ahead, not just for those involved, but for the greater community as well.

Hardy Weed Warrier Volunteers Remove Unwanted Invasives

by Kevin Carpenter-Driscoll

With fall right around the corner, a group of dedicated volunteers offered their time and service to remove invasive plants from the pollinator garden at Buddy Attick Park. The morning of Saturday, September 12, was cool and overcast, perfect weather for working outdoors. The group met at the food forest demonstration area where they listened to a quick introduction by Kevin Carpenter-Driscoll, environmental coordinator with the City of Greenbelt. He introduced some of the invasive species they would be targeting for removal and gave an overview of the tools and techniques they would employ. The group then made their way to the pollinator garden to begin their work. The focus for the day was to remove invasive vines including Japanese hops, bindweed and porcelain berry. These species will crowd out and cover native species, starving them of sunlight and competing for resources.

Volunteers of all ages worked together in family groups to remove these and other invasive plants from the pollinator garden. For many, this was a great opportunity to get outside and be active after a long quarantine over spring and summer. One volunteer, Jovce Abma, remarked that it was the first time she had gone out and performed an activity since March. Many of the volunteers were scouts or students with their families working to gain some service hours for school or for their scout troop.

The work done by these volunteers has created space for the native flowers and grasses in the pollinator garden so they will provide food and habitat to the native pollinators that rely on these plants to survive. The group was able to observe some of the species supported by the garden, from a juvenile black rat snake safely hiding among the detritus, to the numerous butterflies, wasps and flies that rely on the nectar and pollen of the plants. The habitat provided in these kinds of ecosystems supports a vast array

The Department of Public Works will be holding more Weed Warriors events to remove invasive plants and plant native species around Greenbelt Lake. The next event will take place on Saturday, October 10. To register, email Carpenter-Driscoll at kdriscoll@greenbeltmd.gov. Volunteers Clean Trail for National Public Lands Day

by Beverly Palau

This year, National Public Lands Day was observed on September 26, and the community in Greenbelt answered the call. Nineteen volunteers lent their time and labor to participate in a trash pick-up, sponsored by the Department of Public Works, along the Indian Creek Trail and stream. National Public Lands Day is celebrated annually around the country on the fourth Saturday of September and is a signature event for the National Environmental Education Foundation. It promotes both public enjoyment and conservation of the nation's public lands through free park admissions and volunteer activism.

Off to Work

The morning began at 10 a.m. in the Beltway Plaza parking lot at the corner of Cherrywood Lane and Breezewood Drive. Councilmembers Leta Mach and Edward Putens were in attendance and asked local community leader, Kristin Weaver, to read aloud the proclamation for National Public Lands Day to begin the event. The city's environmental coordinator, Kevin Carpenter-Driscoll, then gave a safety briefing and quick instructions before the group set off across Cherrywood Lane to begin the morning's work.

The Indian Creek Trail runs parallel with Cherrywood Lane and along Indian Creek, before it passes under Greenbelt Road and runs toward Lake Artemesia.

Wetland Cleanup

The paved path of the trail encircles a wetland habitat, and at its north end connects with the Greenbelt Station community. The creek and the wetlands are a vital part of the Anacostia watershed providing habitat to native wildlife, filtering stormwater and serving as part of the nutrient and water cycles from the land out to the Chesapeake Bay. Keeping these areas clean and free of litter is an important aspect of responsible stewardship and for maintaining the overall health of the Bay.

At the end of the event a slight drizzle began as the last of the refuse was weighed and loaded onto the dump truck. The volunteers contributed a combined total of 57 hours and managed to collect a staggering 552 pounds of litter, as well as two tires, a rusty bicycle and various pieces of old scrap metal. A huge thank you and round of applause goes out to all of the volunteers that provided their time and service to Greenbelt's public lands.

Councilmembers Leta Mach and Edward Putens look on as community leader Kristin Weaver reads the proclamation before the start of the event.

Greenbelt Dog Park Reopens With Updated Rules and Fees

by Mya Zepp

The Greenbelt Dog Park reopened on September 26 with new rules after being closed due to COVID-19. When the pandemic struck, the park closed due to health and safety precautions along with other parks in D.C., Maryland and Virginia.

The new park rules mainly consist of an updated version of the previous park rules along with new age restrictions regarding children at the park, stating "Children under eight years of age are strongly discouraged from using the park."

The reopening came with updated rules, policies and a warning to use at your own risk during the pandemic, according to Nelly Ortiz, Greenbelt's animal control officer.

There are no pandemic-specific rules in place at this time other than a general rule to respect others and try to social distance when possible.

City councilmembers could not reopen the park until they were in agreement regarding the new park rules.

Those who wish to visit the dog park must submit an application that includes their agreement to park rules, the medical information of the dog(s) in question, plus a $10 annual fee for residents and a $30 annual fee for non-residents, according to Ortiz.

The dog park is open only to dog owners who have submitted an application and received a permit. Applications must be resubmitted annually to remain in good standing. Applications can be found on the city website at greenbeltmd.gov/dogpark.

The annual fee covers all dogs in a single household; however, only two dogs per owner are allowed at the park at one time.
